Dancin' With the Honeybees Comes to NJMC's Meadowlands Environment Center

LYNDHURST, N.J. – The scientific magic of the honeybee hive comes to life when Cliff Wright-Sunflower, master beekeeper, environmental educator and storyteller, brings Dancin' With The Honeybees to the New Jersey Meadowlands Environment Center in Lyndhurst on Saturday, September 20 at 1:00 pm.

Dancin' with the Honeybees uses storytelling, poetry, prose, puppetry, music, dance and participatory theatre and is aimed at children ages 3-10.

With 25 years experience as a beekeeper and as the owner of Bear Honey Farms in Pennsylvania with his wife Lois, Cliff has gained a hands-on understanding of bees and their place in the ecosystem. He is able to reach all levels of students and adults with concepts and facts about the ecology of the natural world.

Each participant in Dancin' With The Honeybees will make a beeswax candle to take home. The cost is $5 per persons and $4 for members. Pre-registration is required, and children under 10 must be accompanied by an adult.

The program is part of the MEC's Fall 2008 Schedule of Events – a series of programs for children and adults highlighting nature, the environment, astronomy and just plain fun!

Future programs include Wolf Visions, The World of Robots and The Science of Chocolate.
